

NOKI CHAIR

by ryota yokozeki

Noki chair draws from both architectural and natural elements in Japan. The shape of the backrest, with a distinctive lip on the top, is reminiscent of the eaves under the roof of rural Japanese houses, a feature known locally as "noki". The designer Yokozeki wanted the upholstery on the seat and back to resemble snow settled on a bench, or indeed the eaves of the houses in his native Gifu prefecture. These ideas and memories gave life to the form of the chair, while adherence to the strict and precise rules of proportions ensured the correct balance to produce a deceptively minimal, yet beguiling chair.

NATADORA

light oak

walnut/fleece mortar

black/fleece mortar

CONFIGURATIONS

W425xD520xH835

CONSTRUCTION

frame: solid oak or solid walnut

seat panel: plywood

upholstered parts: padded with high-density foam

NATADORA

NATADORA